

Spring has sprung in the Waterloo Region bringing warm weather and longer days. Spring also means the return of the region's wildlife. Though cute and adorable, we ask that tenants do not feed the wildlife in the area.

We have received a number of reports that tenants are throwing food from their balconies to feed the neighbourhood wildlife. We ask that you refrain from doing so as this causes a mess and can also attract unwanted animals to the property. This includes but is not limited to bird seed, pieces of bread, and other food products.

Waterloo Region has a number of parks and wildlife preservation areas. We recommend visiting Waterloo Park's small petting zoo if you are interested in feeding wildlife. It's fun, free, and great for kids!

We thank all residents for their cooperation.
